Hands off Poland, Pope warns states

VATICAN CITY, March 29 (R) - Pope John Paul has made his second appeal within 24 hours for a peaceful settlement of the Polish crisis and indirectly warned other nations against interfering in Poland's affairs.

VOL. VI NO. 122

The pope was speaking Sunday from the window of his private study to thousands of people in St. Peter's Square. Stressing that Poles had the undeniable right to resolve their internal difficulties by themselves he said: "They want to do so and they are capable of doing so."

The pope also recalled the final act of the Helsinki conference on European cooperation and security on the principles of non-interference. It obliged "the participating nations to abstain from any direct, indirect, or collective intervention" in the affairs of another country, whatever their mutual relations were, he said.

The pope did not mention any country in connection with Poland, but Vatican sources said the remark appeared to have been mainly directed at the Soviet Union and Poland's Warsaw Pact allies.

In a letter to Polish Primate Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski Saturday, the pope said that Poles wanted to work and not to strike. "Reports that reach me from various parts of Poland show that vast masses of the working people are conscious of the need to devote themselves fully to their work in order to overcome the country's economic difficulties," the pope wrote.

In Warsaw, Communist Party central committee secretary Kazimierz Barcikowski launched a full scale attack on Solidarity Sunday when he submitted the politburo's report to the ninth committee plenum, which opened here earlier.

The British royal family reportedly announced its intention to furbish its guard with new hats for next July's wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer. The dry-deaners, who are to send a delega-

The central committee secretary said that Solidarity had allowed a right-wing faction to gain the upper hand and, no longer content with simply putting pressure on authorities, was engaged in an "open battle against the party and against communism... a struggle for Barcikowski warned Lech Walesa and the Solidarity leadership to weed out "anticommunist elements' from the union, adding that this was the leaders' responsibility "to their organization and the entire nation."

The report went on to denounce "attacks on the militia," "slanderous propaganda" challenging the country's leadership and the union's policy of "holding a gun to authority's head." Turning to the Bydgoszcz affair, the committee secretary justified the action of local authorities.

Barcikowski said there were "deep divisions" in the party, according to Warsaw radio. He called for full democratization within the organization and warned it would not tolerate factionalism. Democratic elections must be held at all levels and, although room should be allowed for different opinions, majority rule must prevail, he said. Barcikowski said that Tuesday's strike could be catastrophic for Poland.

Jakarta agrees to demands

BANGKOK, March 29 (AP) - Indonesia will meet the demands of hijackers holding 56 people hostage on a Garuda airliner DC-9 here, Thai government spokesman Trairong Suvubri said Sunday night.

One American, identified by Thai and 11.S. officials as Carl Schneider, was seriously wounded in an escape from the Indonesian airliner, which was diverted here Saturday by bijackers demanding the release of 84 political prisoners. The hijackers originally demanded the release of 20 prisoners, later said they wanted 84 prisoners freed.

Eyewitnesses and official sources said Schneider was shot twice in the chest and was pushed or fell out of the aircraft as airport staff were refueling it. He waved for help from the airport tarmac and was immediately retrieved by medical staff who were standing by with a stretcher. Reports Sunday from diplomatic sources in Jakarta said a C-130 Hercules transport was standing by in the Indonesian capital, but there was no information of any prisoners being rounded up.

Prachuab quoted the Briton — Robert Wainwright, 27, of Cromford, Derbyshire as saying that there were only five hijackers on board, instead of the six previously believed.

Wainwright told interrogators that the hijackers, ranging in age from 20 to 40, were armed with machineguns, grenades and dynamite, Prachuab said. The escaped hostage also said there were six non-Indonesians

Peace panel leaves today

JEDDAH, March 29 - The Organization of the Islamic Conference Sunday launched a two-pronged peace drive 24 hours before the departure of its mission to Tehran and Baghdad Monday.

The mission, headed by President Ahmed Sekou Toure of Guinea, Sunday sent PLO chairman Yasser Arafat to Iran, who arrived later in the day in the Iranian capital, to pave the way for the efforts of the Islamic goodwill mission.

Also President Zia ul-Haq of Pakistan sent to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein a message on the peace move. It was delivered Sunday by Pakistan's ambassador in Baghdad Salim Azaman. Iranian officials welcomed the second peace mission, set up by the 42 nation organization at a summit last January in Taif.

In addition to President Sekou Toure, Zia ul-Haq and Arafat, the high-level mission includes Presidents Ziaur Rahman of Bangladesh, Dawoud Jawara of Gambia, Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Olusu, Malaysian Foreign Minister Tunku Ahmad Riza, Senegalese Ambassador Mustapha Sese and Habib Chatti, secretary general of the OIC.

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr told the Associated Press in a telephone interview that he would seek clarifications from the Islamic mediators on their peace proposals. "We are not prepared for anything before they (the Iraqis) leave the soil of our country", Bani-Sadr said in underlining Iran's demand for an Iraqi withdrawal simultaneous with a ceasefire.

The Islamic delegation, efter trips to Baghdad and Tehran in late February and early March, put forward a plan calling for a ceasefire to be followed one week later by a staged Iraqi pullback over a one-month A diplomat from a state participating in the mission said: "Last time the delegates came here to listen and to make proposals. This time they will exert pressure on both sides to end the war in the interests of Islamic unity." Meanwhile, Habib Chatti, said after the morning session that the meeting exclusively discussed the two countries' reply to the committee's proposals. He added that an amendment to the proposals is imminent.

"The important point in the subject is that both parties have a reassuring desire to end the conflict and to reach a peaceful settlement." But, he said, there are obstacles and "we will try to eliminate those obstacles which impede the realization of peace." "We are hopeful of finding a solution to this crisis," he added.

The point of difference between the two countries is that Iran insists that the 1975 Algiers treaty provide the base for negotiations, while Iraq considers it out of the question and insists on a return to the agreement of 1913. Likewise, Iraq insists that Iran recognize the former's territorial sovereignty over the Shatt Al-Arab estuary and some territories on the common borders.

LONDON, March 29 (AP) — Britain's counter-espionage agency, M15, foiled a plot by a group of military and civilian leaders to overthrow Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labor government because they believed his Socialist policies were damaging this country, the Sunday Times reported.

The report quoting former MI5
Director-General Sir Martin Furnival Jones came after a week of bizarre disclosures about the shadowy world of espionage in Britain sparked the first security review in 20 years. In an even more bizarre development, the paper quoted Lady Falkender, the former Marcia Williams who was Wilson's secretary in 1968, as saying that one of the prime movers behind the alleged plot was the late Earl Mountbatten of Burma, Queen Elizabeth II's cousin. Mountbatten was killed Aug. 27, 1979, when Irish Republican Army guerrillas bombed his holiday yacht off Ireland's west

But legislator Ted Leadbetter of the opposition Labor Party, immediately demanded Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government investigate the report and make a full-report to the House of Commons. The paper said that Jones reported to Callaghan after investigating the alleged coup plot and named those involved, who included an army major-general.

It mentioned no names, but quoted Jones as saying the ringleaders were "Civil servants and military men" and described them as "a pretty loony crew."

Callaghan was "not slow to act," he was quoted as saying. Jones said charges were not made against anyone, but several top military officers were disciplined. The paper quoted Lady Falkender as saying that Wilson at that time was alarmed by a major security exercise by troops at London's Heathrow Airport and told her: "They could turn that lot against the government totally."

 Naming Mountbatten as a leading figure in the alleged plot, she said heh a d'a map on the wall of his office showing how it could be done. Harold and I used to stand in the state room at No. 10 (Downing Street)

lipp, King's successor as IPC chairman. Cudlipp said King met with Mountbatten at the Earl's London apartment May 8, 1968, and asked him to serve as the head of a provisional government to take over the country once Wilson was ousted. 'Military presence in North Ireland burdens Britain'

BONN, March 29 (R) - Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey was quoted Sunday as saying Britain's military presence in Northern Ireland was damaging its world standing.

Haughey, due in Bonn Monday for talks with West German leaders, told the magazine Der Spiegel that the presence of 11,000 British troops in Northern Ireland was "a financial burden for the British and unquestionably does their standing in the world no good."

Asked about the results of his Dublin talks with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher last December, he said joint British-Irish working groups were studying ways of bridging their differences on Northem Irelapid. Haughey said Dublin had always consi-

Shipments underway

NGL pipeline tested

Arabia's 1,170-kilometer-long natural gas liquid (NGL) pipeline was reported Saturday to be fully tested and facilitating preliminary shipments of natural gas from the Shedgum gas plant across the Kingdom to Yanhu on the Red Sea.

The pipeline, built parallel to the east-west crude oil pipeline, was not expected to be delivering NGL until later this year or early 1982, when construction was to be completed at the Yanbu gas plant.

The pipeline is currently filled with natural gas from the Shedgum plant, in eastern Saudi Arabia on the Arabian Gulf in order to push water used to test the welds in the last section out of the pipeline, industry sources said. The so-called hydro-tests were officially completed on March 17, when all water was removed from the line, these sources said.

The natural gas will be used to fuel the power plants at the Yanbu industrial center and as a power source for the pump stations positioned along the east-west crude oil line, according to the Arabian-American Oil Company (ARAMCO), which will operate both the NGL line and the Yanbu fractiona-

Dutch discuss cooperati n assistance

AMSTERDAM, March 29 (SPA) -Prince Klaus, husband of the Queen of Holland, conferred here with Minister of Posts, Telegraph and Telephones Dr. Alawi Darwish Kayyal. The meeting dealt with the development of cooperation in the PTT field. It was attended by the Saudi Arabian Ambassador to the Hague, Ziad Al-Shawaf, and the delegation accompanying Dr. Kayyal.

In another development, the Ministry of PTT announced the completion of telephone service provisions to more than fifty remote communities throughout the Kingdom.

The project started in 1399 (1979) when PTT Minister Kayyal became concerned about the smaller communities across the country did not have access to the benefits of phone report said.

The report said that in order to reach all of the communities as quickly as possible, Saudi Telephone perfected a new technique of providing telephone service. The key to the plan was the Kingdom-wide microwave network that runs like a communications highway across the country. Saudi Telephone experts first selected a microwave tower conveniently close to the particular community to be served. A "buffer cabinet" - a small cabinet connected to the microwave signal — was attached to the tower, and a cable was run to the village, the report addec.

The procedure was made more difficult since facilities were lacking in remote locations, terrain often was arduous. When the cable reached the village, installation crews connected the lines to a cabine placed in a central location, enabling all citizens to have convenient access to their new telephones, the PTT ministry said.

Close to 1,000 such lines were placed. When a citizen in a remote village picks up the telephone in the cabine, the telephone signal passes through the cable to the buffer cabinet, through the cabinet to the microwave system, and on to an exchange in one of Saudi Telephone's main offices. In effect, Saudi Telephone reported, the process removes the villager from one of the remote locations to the main office. His call is then reouted from the main office to the required telephone number.

Recently, Saudi Telephone announced that subscribers who place their own long distance calls to North America through International Subscriber Dialing will pay a lower rate per minute than subscribers plactheir calls through an operator. The 25 per cent reduction in tariff rates on ISD calls to Canada and the United States was designed to be of benefit to families with children studying overseas, to students who can more easily afford the lower rates and to citizens with relatives living in North America, a phone company press statement

COMMENT

By Saad Al-Bawaridi Al Jazirah

When the husband has a powerful and impressive personality with his wife, he turns headstrong in her eyes. But when he adopts an obedient attitude, she considers him a silly person. She is scared of the first, though she respects him. She loves and wants the other, but does not care much about him.

If you want to command respect from your wife, you have to be prudent and strong - remembering that a woman, like a man, gives respect to the powerful, but loathes the weak. The balanced strength of a man lies inhis personality which tells him how to interact within the framework of others' respect for his do's and dont's.

In the case of husband, imposition means carrying out his wishes with a measure of consciousness and belief. He considers insistence and refusal as a deliberate contravention of what he wants and agrees to. Therefore, it should be necessary to have a good amount of accuracy and precision before awarding him the attribute of obstinacy.

In order to create a correct equation between obstinacy and stupidity in regard to the husband's positive and negative behavior, there should always be some principle for interaction between the two without harming each other or ignoring the interest of the other. As the saying goes, "Don't be too brittle to break and too soft to be squeezed." One ought to remember that one's strength lies in a poised attitude in both cases.

What is important to remember is that you should not lose your will and determination when you are really serious.

Carrington tells Afghans

Europe wants to oust Russians

By Shahid Orakzai Arab News Correspondent

ISLAMABAD, March 29 - British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington has repeated the European community's resolve to work for ending the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and dispelled the impression that the West had reconciled to Soviet thrust in South Asia for certain strategic reason like the fluid Polish situation.

Concluding a 3-day official visit Lord Carrington told a press conference Saturday that a solution of the Afghan crisis was not out of sight although some initiatives for seeking a political settlement had been blocked by the Soviet Union.

He, however, admitted that some developments like the Gulf war and the Polish crisis had taken Western attention off Afghanistan but this reshuffle of priorities did not mean that the European community had turned its back to the Afghan crisis.

The British secretary who had talks with President Zia Ul-Haq and his counterpart Agha Shahi said the negotiations had shown "close identity" of view of major issues like Afghanistan, Iran-Iraq war and the Middle East. However, he evaded questions about sale of arms to Islamabad saying "I dont know how one could say about his private

He said although Britain could not afford "arms-aid" these days, she believed that every country had the right to purchase necessary arms to defend itself. He said although Britain had cut down its aid program the world over, she would maintain its present level in case of Pakistan, Earlier touring refugee camps in Baluchistan province, Lord Carrington announced a special aid grant of £4 million for the province which would form part of the total aid package of £32 million to Pakistan for current British financial year ending March 31.

Lord Carrington hoped that the coming visit of the special representative of U.N. Secretary General for Afghanistan would help level the grounds for initiating talks aimed at political solution of the crisis. He said the Soviet invasion was not an irreversible phenomenon and there was still hope that an ultimate solution would be found. He said that speculation about Soviet expansion toward the Gulf or elsewhere by using Afghanistan as their base, had not proved very fruitful in seeking a solution to the crisis. Waldheim seeking 242 amendment

KUWAIT, March 29 (AP) - U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim was quoted here Sunday as calling for a revision of Security Council Resolution 242 to make it fit for solving the Palestinian ques-

The newspaper Al-Rai Al-Aam also quoted him as calling for a complete withdrawal of Israeli forces from Arab areas seized during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. It said that he welcomed Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's recent proposal for a world conference on the Mideast with the Palestine Liberation Organization partaking.

"The Resolution (242) is, in my opinion, no longer a suitable framework (for a Mideast settlement) because it treats the Palestinian question as a humanitrian problem rather than a political one," the paper quoted Waldheim as contending.

Therefore, I believe it is high time the Palestinian question is handled in a positive manner, as we now have to acknowledge that the Palestinian issue constitutes the crux of the Mideast conflict," he said. "The handling of that problem must be based on the recognition of the legitimate national rights of the Palestinian people and the recognition of the rights of all countries in the region to live in peace within secure borders."

According to Al-Rai Al-Aam, Wal-dheim said the "foremost among all requisities (for peace) will be an Israeli withdrawal from all occupied Arab land, and there must be a solution to the Jerusalem issue.

Commandos shell areas in southern Lebanon

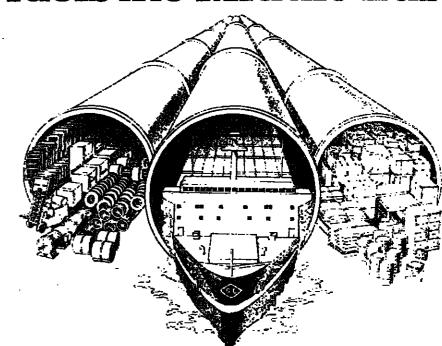

TEL AVIV, March 29 (AFP) - Palestinian forces resumed shelling the towns of Klea and Marjayoun in southern Lebanon Saturday night, according to Lebanese Christian sources quoted by Israeli radio Sunday,

The towns, in the enclave controlled by the Israeli-backed forces of the Lebanese dissident commander, Maj. Saad Haddad, had been under fire from Palestinian artillery earlier Saturday. Maj. Haddad's forces replied with its artillery and the ducl broke out again at 2015 GMT, "with dozens of shells fired on Klea and Mariayoun from Palestinian positions...under the control of Syrian forces to the northol Litani," the radio said, The shelling continued sporadically late into the night. The radio also quoted Maj. Haddad as demanding the immediate replacement of Gen. William Callaghun Irish commander of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL).

Haddad said he would use military force to prevent deployment of the Lebanese army in the region, Israel radio quoted Huddad as saying he would be prepared to accept the presence of the Lebanese army in the village of Kantara, where a unit of army regulars was deployed earlier this month.

Saunders: U.S. did not want separate Egypt-Israel treaty

Washington Bureau WASHINGTON, March 29 - Harold Saunders, former assistant secretary of state for the Near East and South Asia, said that it was not the purpose of the Carter adminstration to have a separate Egyptian-Israeli

In an interview with Arab News, Saunders, who held the department's top Middle East post, the American diplomat "thought that the Camp David as a first step on which a comprehensive tormula could have been perfected. But unfortunately, the U.S. could not win broader Arab and particularly Palestinian support. This was probably because "people in the Arab world jumped quickly to the conclusion that this was a separate peace" and "they could not understand what was there in the Camp David agreements for the Palestinians and for establishing a broader process. It would have brought the Palestinians into a central role in the negotiations" Saunders added.

"Our attempts to bring the Palestinians to resolve the question of Palestinian representation didnotsucceed but in the early part of the Carter administration, we tried to bring everybody together in a renewal of the Geneva conference. But we just could not find a formula that everybody would agree to the presence of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) in the negotiation, though the Palestinians and the Arab countries, all of them, decided that PLO is the only representative of the Palestinian people. It is wrong to say that "we ignored the full Palestinian community. We focused on the territory that the people in the Palestinian community hoped at some point to see as their homeland. And we concentrated on the million people that lived within that territory as being perhaps one group of possible representatives in a negotiation," he added.

"We were very conscious of them in what we did at Camp David. To be sure, we concentrated on the group in the West Bank and Gaza to begin with because they were the only ones we could get involved in the process," Saunders added.

Saunders agreed that the Israeli rush to build settlements was responsible for the disillusionment of the people in the West Bank and Gaza in the whole Camp David process. The Carter administration expressed its opposition to the settlements repeatedly but was unable to stop the process. Saunders felt if the U.S. had pressed the settlements issue firmly with Israel, it would have provoked a fight in Israel in which the government itself would have opposed the U.S. and would have found a great deal of popular support. This would have stalled everything, Saunders

On U.S. commitment not to recognize or negotiate with PLO until it accepted U.N. resolution 242 and Israel's right to exist, Saunders said "the American government is not going to be able to move away from the commitment to the Israeli government and the American Congress without damaging its own integrity. A statement from the PLO that "we are prepared to make peace with Israel provided Israel does certain thing in relation to us" could have an electrifying effect on the peace process, Saunders felt.

"Surely, the views of the PLO must be known. Somebody will have to talk with the PLO. It may happen that it is better done in the current political atmosphere by Euro-peans and others. Maybe that will be their contribution to the peace process," he added. He was not for a change in American policy on the PLO for the time being but felt "that a future dialogue with the PLO should remain an open option." He revealed that he had recommended "a future consideration of it."

Saunders admitted that the U.S. has been keeping contacts with the PLO at the United Nations. And in 1976, the PLO did an admirable job in helping the evacuation of Americans from Beirut when the civil war was at its worst in Lebanon. He also admitted that the PLO had played a very significant role in the release of the American hostages by Iran. When there was so much of anxiety in America about the safety of the hostages, we let the PLO know about our concerns." He also said that they did not speak of this publicly as they thought it would be more effective if silence was maintained.

Saunders disagreed with the views expressed recently by two State Department offibest bet for the Arabs to reach the American public and the American administration was to work with Europe. He felt there was no substitute for direct exchanges between the key figures in the Arab world and the Americans. "The opportunity for understanding are there and we should take advantage of them," Saunders added. As he suggested in the case of the PLO, the Europeans could play a complementary role but not as a substitute for the U.S. in the Middle East. He said the Soviet Union definitely could play a spoiling role in any effort to achieve peace but he was not sure whether the Soviets could play a central role as leaders of the Middle East do not want them to play a central role. He felt that the Soviet objective is in some way to achieve some kind of prominence or predominance in the affairs of the Middle East-that would jeopardize the independence of those countries - as their invasion has done in Afghanistan.

Khomeini's aide hurt in shooting

TEHRAN, March 29 (AFP) - Ayatollah Rabani Shirazi, a member of the constitutional supervisory committee, was wounded Saturday in a shooting attack in Shiraz, capital of Fars province, Radio Tehran reported.

One or possibly two gunmen on a motorbike fired at the Ayatollah, hitting him in the neck, the report said. But his condition was not critical. Ayatollah Shirazi is spiritual leader Ayatollah Khomeini's representative in Fars province, some 900 kms south of here.

The attack was the first reported attempt to kill a leading Muslim clergyman since December when the Forqan group said it had planted a bomb intended to kill prosecutorgeneral Moussavi Ardabili.

The bomb, placed under a bridge near Tehran University, shattered windows in the area but caused no casualties. Forgan, a group opposed to clergy rule, claimed responsibility for killing several prominent clergymen since the Islamic revolution which ousted the Shah from power two years ago.

At trial for spying

Documents forged, Iran ex-deputy premier says

TEHRAN, March 29 (Agencies) - A revolutionary tribunal trying former Iranian Deputy Prime Minister Abbas Amir Entezam on charges including collaboration with the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) has agreed to his request for a defense lawyer. The official Par News Agency quoted religious judge Hojatoleslam Muhammad Gilani as saying that a defense lawyer chosen by the accused would be allowed to act on his behalf for the rest of the trial, which opened March 17. In Saturday's second session, Entezam, 47, pleaded not guilty and said that documents which seemed to incriminate him had been forged.

He complained that he had been denied a defense lawyer and access to material which was made available to the prosecution. At the end of the session. Entezam said he had presented a list of 12 defense lawyers since his arrest 15 months ago but no action had been taken by the Islamic authorities. Hojatoleslam Gilani responded that the court agreed to one of the lawyers named by the defendant,

Entezam, ex-deputy prime minister in Mehdi Bazargan's government, may face the death penalty if convicted of espionage charges. "I will prove in this court that the present documents (accusing him of spying) have been prepared by corrupt elements according to a plan." Enteram told the court. "I will prove in this court that these documents are forged. I will prove ... that the charges mentioned in the indictment are completely false."

The trial opened Saturday with recitations from the Holy Koran, and the religious judge said the Koran referred to usury as being the most beinous sins. "The Holy Koran says that any individual who discloses secrets to the enemies of Islam, cuts his ties with God." judge Gilani told Entezam, adding that if he was found guilty, "this would entail severe

The judge did not specify what the punishment could be, but others convicted of espionage have been executed.

Khomeini has limits, admits Bani-Sadr

BEIRUT, March 29 (AP) - President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr says Iran's leader Ayatollah Khomeini can only "act to a limit" in containing the political in-fighting between supporters of the moderate president and clergy-backed hardliners.

Reached by telephone at his Tehran home from Beirut, the pragmatic, Western-educated president told AP late Saturday night that he has "not surrendered" to political opponents who have criticized his conduct of the war with Iraq.

Speaking in Farsi during the 45-minute interview. Bani-Sadr also said Islamic mediators scheduled to arrive in Tehran Monday must determine who started the Gulf War and suggested Iraq should pay reparations for war losses.

Khomeini ordered a ceasefire on internal squabbling two weeks ago and banned political speech-making by top Iranian officials until the end of the seven-month old Iran-Iraq war. But some bickering has continued and Buni-Sadr was asked if he thought the Khomeini had been successful. "A human being is not god," Bani-Sadr said of Khomeini. "Man has limited means considering the problems, barriers and so on. He can act to a limit."

The 'atement appeared to confirm the opinion of some observers who believe the man who brought down the monarchy of Shah Muhammad Reza Pahlavi in February 1979 was having difficulty in controlling clergy-backed militants.

Asked if he thought Khomeini had the power to control internal conflicts, Bani-Sadr said "Ask him" but later added "Anyway, l believe he has this control."

Bani-Sadr, who has been engaged in a 10-month-long power struggles with Prime Minister Muhammad Ali Rajai who he once described as "incompetent," was philosophical about the internal tensions in Iran.

Conflicts are everywhere in the world. Where isn't there conflicts," he said. "It's everywhere but how much we surrender to them, that is the question. If we do not show weakness but persistence and do not surrender, these (problems) will be solved."

SAHARA CONFLICT

The recent attempted coup in Mauritania did nothing to ease its relations with its erstwhile ally, Morocco.

Mauritania accused Morocco of taking a part in the incident - against the available evidence, one has perhaps to note. The Moroccans for their part, as both their foreign minister and premier have made clear think that the Polisario fighters are using Mauritanian territory as a springboard for their operations against Morocco in the Sahara.

Relations between Morocco and Mauritania started badly enough. Morocco had a standing claim against the Mauritanian territory which it abandoned only reluctantly after independence. It then worked out an agreement with the country, coordinating their policies, an agreement which, on the Mauritanian side at least, has been overtaken by the country's turbulent developments, as coups and counter coups succeeded each

The charge of allowing the Polisario to use Mauritanian soil is itself far from easy to determine. Mauritania was assigned a part of the Sahara as it fought along side Morocco at the beginning of the conflict. It then abandoned its claim to that part, which was immediately contested by Polisario and the Moroccans, making it easy for both sides to accuse it of allowing the other free access.

Relations between the Moroccans, the Mauritanians and the Polisario have reached such a degree of mistrust that there is no real hope of a peaceful solution. But there is a view that such a solution would not be hard to hammer out if the fourth term in the equation, which operates within it by proxy, was willing to find a way out: that fourth term being, of course, Algeria.

Japan boosts foreign aid grants

In several international roles, Japan is looked upon as something of a backslider. Allies persistently exhort Tokyo to play fair with world trade, make room for Indochina refugees, and spend more money for its own defense.

So it was something of a role reversal a few days ago when a foreign ministry official walked over to the U.S. embassy here to deliver a message of consternation: Big cuts in U.S. foreign aid, he declared, would have a deplorable effect on international efforts to help poor countries. They would, he said, refute the longstanding American campaign to get Jápan to give more aid.

The incident underscored a marked change in Japan's once niggardly approach to foreign aid. In the past three years, it has doubled its grants and loans and now feels able to prod other nations to do

It now ranks fourth on the aid-giving roster of industrial countries. Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, after a struggle with budget cutters, has proposed a new five-year package that would at least double the amount spent in the past five years.

In terms of economic resources, Japan still lags behind 11 Western democracies in handing out aid, and the new plan will not change that ranking. But it is ahead of the United States, which ranks 15th in that respect, and diplomats credit Japan with making an extraordinary change in the past few years. "It's a noble effort, no matter how you look at it," said an American diplomat.

More significantly, in the eyes of developing countries that get it, Japan has significantly shifted its aid program from one designed primarily to promote its own business interests to a more generous concept. Less of the money is hedged with requirements that it be spent back in Japan. More is in outright grants, less in loans to be paid back.

The focus also has changed to a more sophisticated form of aid giving. It used to be mainly handouts for building roads, drainage systems, and the like. The new plans aim at training recipients in Japanese technology or lending start-up assistance for small and medium-sized businesses.

It is not all altruism. Japan has come to believe it has a broad interest in the stability of friendly developing countries, especially in Southeast Asian countries rich in the natural resources Japan needs. About 40 per cent of its aid goes to five Southeast Asian nations visited by Suzuki recently on his first trip abroad as prime minister.

He announced several multimillion-dollar grants, promised to help Thailand and the Philippines develop energy resources, offered each one a new technology training center and launched two long-stalled industrialization projects in Indonesia and Malaysia.

Until the late 1970s, Japan was a parsimonious donor whose aid budgets were largely an extension of the country's aggressive mercantilism. Loans and grants were, in the vernacular, "tied" by agreements requiring that about 40 per cent of the funds to be spent buying goods from Japan, often at high

For example, much of Japan's aid to the Philippines until the mid-1970s had to be spent buying Japanese ships, highway-building materials and other goods. Like other recipients, the Philippines objected. "It was as if I gave you some money and then insisted that you buy a dress from me," recalls Edna Ventura, an aide attache with the embassy here." In the end, I would profit. But the Americans used to be the same way."

Now, only about 16 per cent of Japan's aid is "tied" and the total amount of grants has grown swiftly. The government embarked on a campaign in 1978 to double the total in three years. It has now surpassed that goal and will spend about $3.3 billion this year. The new path stems from a substantial change in Japanese attitudes a few years ago, according to Koichiro Matsuura, economic aid specialist at the foreign ministry. Public opinion polls began showing a majority of Japanese in favor of helping other countries, he said.

"That sentiment did not exist in the 1960," Matsuura said. "But in the 1970s, we reached a high stage of development and life became more comfortable for the Japanese. People were able to look around in the world. They also feel that what happens to their economy depends on what happens in the poorer countries."

Suzuki seized on the momentum this year to propose another long-range doubling of aid budgets. In part, sources say, it is to make up for Japan's inability to expand its military defense budget this year, to the dismay of the Americans. Suzuki has redefined defense to embrace what he calls "comprehensive security," a catch-all that includes economic aid. One aide has said that in lieu of a defense buildup, Japan should concentrate on increasing economic assistance. "Suzuki is well aware of that," said one official.

As in the United States, budget cutters in Japan sliced away at the foreign ministry's original proposal and the new five-year plan is not as expansive as aid enthusiasts had hoped. In the past five years, Japan spent about $21.4 billion — and it will go higher if the budget crunch eases.

Underground leaflets in Chinese mail

For foreign residents in Peking, the mail from home these days occasionally arrives with something extra slipped in by anti-communists, suppor ters of the "gang of four" or foes of U.S. President Ronald Reagan

Neatly resealed letters, especially those bearing greeting cards or other bulky camouflage, pick up mimeographed Chinese-language declarations somewhere along their route. The insertion work sometimes delays them by a month or so.

At least some of the insertions are believed to be done in Hong Kong, and Western analysts say almost all certainly come from outside China. rather than from dissident groups within the coun-

However, Communist Party Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping, China's top leader, told a Japanese visitor that there were underground leaflets within China attacking him. He said it is a good sign, indicating the dissidents were in a weak position.

Party General Secretary Hu Yaobang, Premier Zhao Ziyang and Politburo Member Peng Zhen as a "new gang of four." The declaration, entitled "Voice of the Heart," said the Communists had established a feudal, Fascist dictatorship in China, a natural foundation for the rise of the "gang of four."

One of the mailed declarations describes Deng,

The four, led by Chairman Mao-Tse-Tung's widow, Jiang Qing, recently were tried. Jiang Qing and former Vice-Premier Zhang Chunqiao were given suspended death sentences on charges of frame-ups and persecution.

The declaration said this was only revenge and a move in a power struggle within the party. It said that under the "new gang of four," the people's fate would be the same "enslavement and oppression" and the only answer was to root out "Marxist

Another leaflet, signed by a "group of education workers," said it was "daydreaming" to think that the "gang of four" could be made a scape goat for 30 years of evil, despotism and corruption in China. If the gang's trial is the first step in criticizing Marxism, Mao's thought and Communist Party dictatorship, the leaflet added, "then it accords with the will of the broad masses of the people."

Still another, labeled "Voice of the Masses." spoke of the "poverty and backwardness of socialism" contrasted to "blossoming flowers" of Taiwan, seat of the Nationalist Chinese govern-

It urged "a great political revolution to emancipate minds in earnest, encourage free airing of views, practice democracy and renounce Marxism and the dictatorship of the proletariat." It also said the ultimate goal of the Polish workers' strike is to overthrow Poland's communist regime, and "the suffering of the Chinese workers from oppression and exploitation are ten times and even a hundred times more than that of the Polish workers."

A statement by the "Shanghai branch of the Chinese Communist Party anti-revisionist comrades' association" contained Jiang Qing's purported defense statement at her trial. It denounces Deng and the late President Liu Shao-Chi, whom she allegedly had persecuted to death, as peddlers of feudalism, capitalism and revisionism. The party had expelled Liu, the statement said, adding: 'Could Jiang Qing alone be able to make the decision to expel Liu Shao-Chi from the party once and for all?"

It also predicted the "inevitable" overthrow of "a handful of capitalist roaders in power headed by Deng."

One statement signed "a group of Canton postal and telegraph workers" is an open letter telling Deng not to be obsequious to new U.S. President

It said Communist Party documents had described Reagan as the most ferocious enemy of the Chinese people, a stubborn anti-communist bent on creating "two Chinas" - a reference to upgrading U.S. relations with Taiwan.

After his election, it said, Chinese newspapers reversed their position toward Reagan and Deng had said he would be welcome to visit China.

Letter to the editor

I am writing to seek an advice from you. I have, been working with a company in Dammam for the last two years. They took me on release from my original sponsor. But unfortunately they have been keeping me contrary to the law of the land. They signed a preliminary letter of appointment in which they stated that after a three months' probationary period they would sign with me the standard agreement form. But they have not done so nor is there any possiblity of doing so. They are having me work in wrong profession also which does not correspond with my visa designation. They said they would change my designation too through the Labor Office. But they show no inclination to do so. They have not issued me any foreigners' work permit card also.

Under these circumstances, and being a lawabiding person, I am at a fix and do not know how I can have them remove these impediments. I would be most obliged if you could kindly give me some

Most faithfully,

Arabian Press Review

A majority of newspapers Sunday led with the meeting of the Islamic goodwill committee which was held in Jeddah Saturday to study the replies of Iran and Iraq to the committee's proposals on a ceasefire between the two countries. Meanwhile. Al Bilad led with the opening of the 11th session of the Senate of Medina's Islamic University by the Minister of Higher Education. Al Yom gave lead coverage to the press statement issued at the end of Australia's Deputy Premier Douglas Anthony's official visit to Saudi Arabia. It highlighted the two countries' accord on cooperation in commercial, economic and other fields.

Newspapers frontpaged U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig's upcoming visit to Saudi Arabia to discuss the international situation and the Middle East crisis with Foreign Minister Prince Saudi Al-Faisal. They also highlighted Haig's concern with the deteriorating situation in Poland which he described as "very grave". Newspaper also said the situation in Lebanon is continuously deteriorating.

Al Medina played as front-page story the royal approval to invite tenders for the Mecca-Medina expressway. Crown Prince Fahd's reaffirmation of the Kingdom's keenness to effect a ceasefire between Iraq and Iran figured prominently in the newspapers, which also highlighted Greece's possible recognition of Israel in the wake of the Greek agriculture minister's recent visit to the Zionist

Newspaper editorials mainly concentrated on the U.S. Secretary of State's visit to the region and the fresh bid by the Islamic goodwill committee to bring about a peaceful solution to the Iraq-Iran armed conflict. In an editorial, Al Jazirah noted that if Haig's criticism of the U.S. foreign policy aims at a revision of the U.S. stance on the Camp David accords, it would be welcomed by both moderate and other Arab states. The paper said it would mean a new U.S. policy toward the Middle East based on neutrality and justice. A positive change in U.S. foreign policy would mean a lot for the future of the Middle East issue as well as the U.S.-Arab common relations and interests, it added. If, however, Haig's criticism means U.S. failure to attract the Arab states - mainly the moderates - toward the Camp David accords, and hence a new policy to do so successfully, the paper said it would meet the same failure. The paper reiterated that the Arabs have taken a unanimous stance on the Camp David since it serves the interest of Israel only.

On the same subject, Al Yom reiterated that if Washington is actually keen on finding peace for the Middle East, it would have to advise Israel to renounce its intransigence and give up all Arab territories it has occupied by force. The paper felt convinced that the Reagan administration can successfully do that by various means, if it has the will to do so. A mere shuttle to the Middle East to try to understand the situation would serve no fruitful purpose, it said, adding that time has come when the Palestinians ought to be restored their legitimate rights in the interest of peace and security of the whole region. Peace in the Middle East would minimize the possibility of a third global war, added the paper.

Discussing the task of the Islamic goodwill committee, Al Nadwa said that anyone pursuing the endless efforts of the committee cannot but praise activities which have consistently aimed at finding an agrecable solution to the continuing crisis between Iraq and Iran. The paper exhorted both countries to show understanding and flexibility so that the committee finds good ground to bring its difficult mission to a complete success. The paper said further that honest efforts would have to be made to save the whole region from a possible intervention by foreign powers under the pretext of protecting their interests in the region.

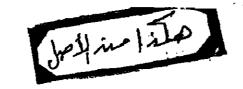

Commenting on the meeting of the Mecca Islamic summit bureau, Okaz said this step proves that there is a will and determination to pursue the successful implementation of the resolution of the historic summit of Mecca and Taif. The paper added that this step may not have come as a surprise to those who are well aware of the concern and selfless endeavors of the Kingdom's leadership to bring about Islamic unity and solidarity. The paper felt convinced that the exchange of views among the bureau's members would give a more tactical spur to the means for the implementation of the summit resolutions.

On the other hand, Al Bilad commented on the activities of the Islamic University of Medina, which opened its doors to young Muslims from all over the world for advanced studies in all branches of Islamic

Taj Mahal -the pinnacle of architecture

The lasting mark of the Moghul era

By Geoff Gardner

NEW DELHI — Think of India and the images flow — the inexorable splendor of the Taj Mahal; 660 million people, many living in ineffable poverty; numerous styles of architecture from its 5,000 years of recorded history; a modernizing country, one of the leaders of the Third World. India, then, and especially Delhi, demands much more preparation from the visitor than most countries. A glance through Nagel's or Fodor's fine guidebooks and casual conversation with friends who have visited there is not enough.

For those who go just to snap rolls of film and hurry from fort to temple to mosque, the result will be a drawer full of photos with captions of little meaning. "Knowing" Delhi, actually a combination of cities dating back a thousands years, takes longer than the standard few days most vacations allow. A helpful vantage point, however, is to concentrate on one of Delhi's many eras. The Moghul Era has been an essential and lasting influence on the capital city and on the whole of northern India. With Moghul history in mind, the side trip to Agra and the Taj Mahal is even richer, in this country whose history is one of foreign invasions.

Who were the Moghuls? Their first great impact in Indian history dates from 1526, when the Mughul general Babur defeated the Afghan Sultan of Delhi at Paniput, 55 miles north of Delhi. They came from Kabul after migrating there from their homeland in Central Asia. Descended from the legendary figures Tamerlane and Ghengis Khan, Babur founded the Moghul Empire, one which endured as an effective political organization until the 1700's.

Babur was succeeded by his son Humayun in 1530, who lost control of the still unstable empire, but regained it in 1555. He soon died in a fall down the library steps of the Purana Qila, the sixth of Delha's eight cities. Purana Qila, built on a site which dates back to 1000 B.C., is the visitor's oldest spectacular sight of the Moghul influence. The fort was built by Sher Shah Suri (1538-45) who exiled Humayun. The citadel covers a two km perimenter. Red sandstone walls stand partially intact today, rising high and deep enough so that visitors can climb them and catch an impressive view of modern Delhi, including the presidential palace on one side and the vast zoological gardens from the other.

The fort is more like a park now with families picuicing and wandering about the ruins. A few buildings stand within the walls. In one, the curious can climb the same steep steps which caused Humayun's demise a year after his return from exile. The steps are in a double story octagonal tower of red sandstone with remnants of marble relief. At the top is a pavilion affording a view of the fort. The building was used as a pleasure resort by Sher Shah and later converted to a library by the second Moghul ruler.

More impressive is the Qal'a-i'Kuhna-Masjid, the "Mosque of the Old Fort," built by Sher Shah in 1541. The large prayer-hall is 750 square meters with five archway entrances. Marble and other stone decorate the structure. In the courtyard is a shallow tank and fountain which was used by the faithful to wash. The mosque shows the transition from earlier styles with its arches, oriel windows and corner towers.

Not far from the Purana Qila is Humayun's tomb, erected in the 16th century. It marked the beginning of the Moghul style of architecture which culminated in buildings in Agra and Fatehpur Sikri. Constructed of red sandstone (as most of the Moghul buildings were) and white, black, and yellow marble and capped by a high marble dome which foreshadows the dome of the Taj Mahal, the huge mausoleum was built by the ruler's widow. Several other Moghul rulers are buried adjacent to the main chamber.

The greatest of the Moghuls was Akbar the Great (1560-1605), the only one to be called "Great". Assuming power when he was 13, he became a great military leader, progressive administrator, and enlightened ruler. He did away with taxes on Hindu pilgrims, appointed many native Hindus to government, forbade the enslaving of prisoners of war, created a more efficient and fair civil administration, and encouraged art, literature, and learning.

As a builder, Akbar ordered the construction of the city of Fatehpur Sikri to be built in celebration of a male heir. Advised to go to a holy man who lived in a small village near Agra, the ruler was told he would father three sons. When one of his wives became pregnant with the future emperor Jahangir and two more sons were born, he built the city as his new capital. At the height of Akbar's power the empire spread over northern India and part of what is today Pakistan and Afghanistan

Another of his sons, Shah Jahan, was to be the best remembered of all by building the Taj Mahal. Succeeding the weak and dissapated Jahangir (1605-27), Shah Jahan, though not the great or talented leader his father was, lived the most lavishly. And he was an inspired builder. Using marble, gold, and precious stones, he is responsible for not only the Taj, but the Jami Masjid, the largest mosque in India. Among his other buildings are the colossal Red Forts of Agra and Delhi. Delhi's Red Fort (so-called because of the ever-present red sandstone) is the structure richest in Indian history. Its significance stretches down the centuries from 1648 to Indian independence in 1947.

The Jami Masjid was finished in 1650 and is now a landmark in that section of the capital called Old Delhi. The red sandstone and white marble mosque has a facade of 11 arches. It is surmounted by three domes ornamented with alternating stripes of black and white marble and has four 41 meter high tapering minartets. Standing on a platform, as so many of the monuments do, it has a nearly 100 sq. meter courtyard with domed pavilions and corridors at the corners. The 1600 sq. meter prayer-hall is two bays deep.

Lying about 500 meters west of the Jami Masjid is an imposing giant — the Red Fort of Delhi. Here history unfolds with the nightly "Sound and Light" show, a must for an overview of Indian history. More dynamic than any guidebook, the presentation helps the complex history of Delhi and the Moghul fall into a coherent line. The splendor, pagentry and decadence of the dynasty are recreated with colored lights directing the viewers' attention to the Divan-i-Aam — the Hall of Public Audience; the Divan-i Khas — the Hall of Private Audience; Khas Mahal — palace of color; the Hammams — royal baths; and the Pearl Mosque — built by Shah Jahan's son.

The core of the Red Fort was completed in the surprisingly short span of nine years after Shah Jahan transferred his capital from Agra. The size and scope of the fort is astonishing. Measuring 900 by 550 meters with the walls winding a 2.4 km perimeter and rising 33 meters, the fort was impenetrable in the 16th Century. Outside the ramparts was a moat connected to the river Yamuna, which formed a natural barrier as well as providing the water supply.

The main gateways are three stories flanked by towers, also built by Shah Jahan's son, Aurangzeb. Visitors walk in the Lahore Gate, through a roofed passage, and on through the drum house where music was once played. Now at the entrance of the palace they walk across a spacious lawn which was once a courtyard. The next sight is the Hall of Public Audience. Here the ruler received the public and heard complaints while sitting under a marble canopy on his jeweled throne. Behind the throne and still visible, are panels inlaid with multicolored stones representing flowers and birds. The alcove is raised. Its pillars and arches give this over 300-year old structure a continuing sense of majesty.

Farther in is a long courtyard with surrounding buildings, gardens, fountains, and waterways. Although the forts is in need of some repair, the visitor can still sense how the emperors lived. Sound and Light highlights the appropriate building while re-creations of the era take listeners back to the personalities who inhabited the palace. The story is told chronologically, dating from the day Shah Jahan chose the site until Aug. 15, 1947, when Jawaharlal Nehru delivered his Independence Day oration from the fort's ramparts. This segment is the actual radio broadcast of that speech.

Other highlights are the celebrations of nine days which marked the completion of the palace (succeeding emperors made additions); an account of the daily life as told by a French traveller, an account of the struggle among Shah Jahan's sons for the throne (eventually won by Aurangzeb, who then imprisoned his father in the Red Fort of Agra where he could gaze at the Taj from his room). The story moves through history to the Indian Mutiny of 1857. Sepoys (Indian troops) made up of Muslims and Hindus primarily, believed their bullets had been greased with the fat of cow and pigs and they revolted against their British overlords. The troops occupied thefort and named Bahadur Shah, the last of Moghul emperor. After a month the British returned in force, retook Delhi and the fort, and exiled Bahadur Shah Burma after shooting two of his sons.

The show concludes with the British decision to transfer power to an Indian government. Nehru, the first prime minister of the new democracy, addressed a huge gathering from the fort's ramparts. The tone of the Red Fort is set by the Hall of Private Audience, where the famed Peacock Throne once sat, before being taken to Persia by Nadir Shah in 1739. Estimated to be worth as much as 12 million pounds sterling, the throne sat under a ceiling made of solid silver. One of the walls were written a Persian couplet:

'If there be a paradise on earth; 'It is here! It is here!

The hall has openings of engrailed arches on the sides. Still visible are the inlaid floral designs and gilded and painted decoration. Gardens and pavilions are interspersed in the regal housing. The royal baths with marble floors inlaid with patterns of multi-colored stone accent the extravagance of Shah Jahan. In one apartment, one of the three fountain basins emitted rose water, according to legend. At the north end of the fort the emperor and his court watched elephant fights and other spectacles between the ramparts and the Yamuna river.

Shah Jahan's son Aurangzeb expanded the palace area and the fort though he was far more austere than his ancestors. Yet one decorative and functional addition was the Pearl Mosque, built for his own use, in 1699. The prayer hall is inlaid with outlines of small carpets in black marble. On top are three bulbous domes, which were originally copper-plated.

The Moghul influence spread far beyond Delhi, most notably 124 km south, in Agra. Here Shah Jahan built his acclaimed tomb to his beloved wife Mumtaz Mahal, who died in childbirth. And here Shah Jahan planned to build an equal tomb for himself, only in black marble. The facts surrounding the Taj Mahal are well known — 20,000 workers from India and nearby countries labored 22 years to build it at a price of $70,000,000 in today's value. The scaffolding was made of stone due to the shortage of wood and cost more than the building materials.

It was the pinnacle of Moghul architecture: daring, geometrically perfect, ostentatious. An incredible use of people and resources to build a monument to love ... and a monument

WONDER: Taj Mahal, considered one of the seven wonders of the world, was built by Shah Jahan, a Moghul emperor, in the memory of his wife. Muntaz Mahal.

Private radio stations thrive in Belgium

By Robert Wielaard

BRUSSELS (AP) — The last time anyone counted there were 130 private radio stations operating in Belgium, a nation of 20 million — a remarkable number in a country where private broadcasting is illegal.

"Because the government won't act we are headed for anarchy in the airwaves," complained Conservative legislator Frans Grootjans, who has introduced a bill to legalize the private broadcasters — or "free radios" as they are known here — formally ending a state monopoly the government has always defended tooth and nail.

In 1979, private radio broadcasting was only for those quick enough to elude the law or brave enough to risk confiscation of their transmitters. Police used to regularly raid private radio stations — usually located in unmarked homes and offices — cart away all the equipment and fine anyons if a station.

Today, police will only act, if a station interferes with air traffic control or police radio and often they will simply ask station operators to use another frequency. "There has been a growing teadency at the political level in this country to legalize the free radios," according to H. Boesman, the spokesman for Communications Minister

Freddy Willockx.

Although the government is apparently willing to change the current legislation, it has taken no formal steps in that direction. In the meantime, illegal radio stations have become something of a growth industry. Nowhere is the pirating of the government-owned airwaves more evident than in Brussels, a city of about 1.1 million, where at last count 30 private broadcasters were crowding the unused area on the FM band between 100 and 104 megaberts.

They and stations elsewhere in the country broadcast up to 24 hours a day in Flemish and French, Belgium's two official languages. At least two stations feature shows in English.

music, from interviews to lengthy local news casts.

Most of the stations have a limited transmitting power—in some cases reaching only 10 kilometers. Two stations can be heard throughout the country. "We provide counter information," says a spokesman for Radio Scorpio in Leuven, a university town 20 kilometers east of Brussels. The comment reflects the general dissatisfaction among the private broadcasters with the quality of programing on the state-run network.

All pirate broadcasters shun commercials — which are illegal on all Belgian radio and television — although some would eventually like to have them as a source of revenue.

So far the country's private stations have operated with the help of donations and fund-raising events. Some stations, like Radio Contact — Belgium's largest pirate station — accept money from record companies to play their products a certain number of times. "This yields up to $3,000 a month," says Georges Neuckens, a former Radio Contact disc jockey.

The boom in free enterprise broadcasting has drowned out American Forces Network (AFN) Radio which broadcasts from Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe (SHAPE), 60 kilometers south of Brussels. AFN broadcasts at 103.3 MHZ, in the thick of the pirate band, and some listeners have complained that they can no longer receive AFN's round-the-clock service of American news and entertainment.

The private radio stations have taken a big bite out of Belgium's listenership too. According to a recent poll, almost 20 per cent of Belgians listen to the private stations. In the 18-24 age group, this figure is almost 40 per cent. Audience loyalty rose to unknown heights in 1979 when police were about to raid Radio Louvain-La-Neuve, a university station near Leuven. The announcer called on his audience to protest. More than 1,500 listeners converged on the station and forced the police to retreat.

Concern over Namibia

U.S. sending mission to Africa

WASHINGTON, March 29 (Agencies) — The administration of President Ronald Reagan is sending a high-level mission shortly to South Africa and key black African states to consult on future U.S. moves toward Namibia, the South African-controlled territory the United Nations is pushing toward independence. The delegation will be headed by Chester Crocker, the designated assistant secretary of state for African affairs, said the State Department sources, who declined to

The mission has been cloaked in secrecy, but will produce clues on the administration's stand toward the white-run South Africa and its black neighbors. Crocker will stop in a number of countries concerned with propelling Namibia, also known as Southwest Africa, toward black rule and its separation from South Africa.

The United Nations no longer considers

South Africa's trusteeship of Namibia to be legal and the U.N. Security Council has approved economic sanctions against South Africa. On March 24, Nigeria and 49 other African nations issued a statement at the United Nations expressing "deep concern" over signs of American support for South Africa. The statement said such a policy would perpetuate South Africa's "illegal occupation of Namibia."

The sources refused to say if the Americans would stop in Angola, a Marxist-run former colony of Portugal, where pro-Western insurgents are still fighting a guerrilla campaign. The Reagan administration has asked Congress to repeal a federal law passed in 1976 that bans U.S. aid to any groups in Angola, except for humanitarian purposes.

The sources said Crocker's group is expected to leave within the next several days. Its itinerary beyond South Africa was not known, but some of the nearby nations

China accuses Soviet media of spreading false reports

PEKING, March 29 (AP) - China's official Xinhua news agency has accused the Soviet Union of being behind rumors that China intended to annex Pakistan and threatened India's security. Xinhua said the Indian newspaper National Herald carried reports that Pakistan and China were building a highway to link Pakistan's China-aided Karakoram highway with an existing road in the Pakistan-controlled area of Jammu and

"This is a rumor, pure and simple," Xinhua said Saturday. "However, the paper in an editorial pretended to be serious about the false report, saying that this evident thrust of China's toward the Indian ocean had not only become a sword placed on India's neck, but also indicated that China would annex Pakistan in the not too distant future."

Xinhua added: "One can only surmise that the Indian paper issued this editorial to reinforce (Soviet news agency) Tass rumors at a time when China and India are improving their relations." It accused Tass of trying to drive a wedge between China, Pakistan and India by alleging that Pakistan and China are building up armaments near the Indian border, endangering India's security.

Meanwhile, China expressed its regret Saturday over what it called the Netherlands "undue delay" in starting negotiations on downgrading the two countries' relations. China already had demanded the recall of the Dutch Ambassador in Peking in retaliation for the proposed sale of two Dutch submarines to Taipei. Ambassador Jan Kneppelhout left for home on March 5.

The official Xinhua news agency said Assistant Foreign Minister Song Zhiguang called in Dutch charge d'affaires an interim B. de Bruyn Ouboter Saturday and proposed that negotiations on reducing relations to the charge d'affaires level begin before the end of March. Song requested a prompt answer, Xinhua added. It said Song told Ouboter that China had stated its demand for a downgrading of relations in notes on Jan. 19 and Feb 27, but no answer on entering into negotiations had been received from the Dutch.

It said Song reiterated China's stand that the Dutch government's approval for the submarine sale violated the principles in the 1972 communique on upgrading Sino-Dutch relations to the ambassadorial level.

which have been most concerned about Namibia's future are Botswana, Mozambique, Tanzania and Zambia.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig testified on Capitol Hill Thursday that U.S. policy toward Southern Africa is still under review. Haig met with Ishaya Audu, the external affairs minister of Nigeria, one of the largest and most powerful of the black African nations, Friday. Audu said after the meeting that he is optimistic the new administration will join efforts to promote change in South Africa.

The trip of Crocker, who is still awaiting Senate confirmation, is the beginning of the process of consultations, said the sources. The administration of former President Jimmy Carter took a sympathetic line toward black aspirations and was highly critical of South Africa's racial policies. The Reagan administration's stand is uncertain, although in a recent televised interview, Reagan referred to South Africa as a "friendly country."

Meanwhile, the White House announced Saturday that Vice President George Bush will head the U.S. delegation to an international conference on refugees in Africa, to be held in Geneva April 9 and 10. The conference is sponsored by the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

It is estimated that more than five million Africans either refugees or displaced persons, in or from countries such as Ethiopia, Djibouti, Chad, Sudan, Uganda, Somalia and South Africa.

17 executed in Zaire for committing robbery

Altogether 20 robbers had been sentenced to death, it added. The 20 had then escaped, but 17 of them were recaptured and executed after President Mobutu Sese Seko refused clemency. The other three remain at large, the radio said. The authorities were appealing to all members of the ruling party, the People's Revolutionary Movement (MPR), to help find the trio.

Berliners protest shortage of housing

BERLIN, March 29 (AP) - Some 150 persons armed with cakes and colored balloons attempted to convince city officials here Saturday that occupying buildings and marching through the streets are not the only ways to protest the city's housing

This time the "squatters" and their sympathizers gathered for "breakfast on the Kurfuerstendamm," Berlin's fashionable main street, to bring attention to the lack of affordable housing. A music group played some of the protest movement's favorite songs while the young, long-haired demonstrators danced along police barricades, briefly stopping traffic.

"We are going to do this every Saturday" said one posticinant. Our one town day," said one participant. Curious tourists and shoppers gathered to click cameras and discuss the housing problem that had provoked this pleasantly unusual protest. The demonstrators said they wanted to protest Tuesday night's search of three occupied houses in the working class sector of Kreuzberg, in Duesseldorf, police blamed 80 to 100 'squatter sympathizers' for Friday night's violence that resulted in damage to banks, offices and other buildings in that northwest German city.

Meanwhile, in Amsterdam, Netherlands, some 20 squatters Saturday occupied part of a downtown office building owned by Intourist, the Russian travel agency, police said.

'Radioactive murder attempt' case opens in France Tuesday

CHERBOURG, France, March 29 (AFP) - The main criminal court here will hear Tuesday a case unique in France and perhaps in the world— an alleged murder attempt by using radioactive waste material. But as the French legal code does not mention the use of radioactivity as a murder weapon, the actual charge is "administering a substance harmful to health.'

Noel Lecomte, 28, is accused of "harming", in March 1979, his foreman Guy Busin, 39 — both worked at France's La Hague plant which processes and disposes of radioactive waste materials. Busin discovered by accident that there were three metal discs under the seat of his car. They contained radioactive waste six times higher than the maximum permissible for a nuclear worker to handle without danger.

A 20-day police investigation pointed to the accused, who had access to the metal containers. Police say he confessed that he found his foreman was "too strict" and "harassed and interfered with me all the time," and that Lecomte admitted taking precautions when he concealed the discs in Busin's car, six months before they were found. Busin underwent treatment and is today working in an area of the plant where there is no radioac-

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP) - A draft report prepared by the Central Intelligence Agency "strongly disagrees" with con-tentions by the administration of President Ronald Reagan that the Soviet Union is a key supporter of international terrorism, govemment sources have said.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said Saturday the CIA intelligence surveyis being circulated on Capitol Hill and within the administration.

He worked in the central services section of the department's radio and visual services and handled, among other matters, reservations for television transmissions by satellite. The U.N. spokesman said Saturday that Sakharov was married with one child. His present whereabouts were not disclosed.

Obote warns Buganda tribe

KAMPALA, March 28 (AFP) - Ugandan President Milton Obote has warned the Buganda, the country's largest tribal group and strongest supporters of the opposition Demoncratic Party (DP); that their lives and property were in danger as long as they allowed underground movements to attack government installations in their areas.

Obote, whose Uganda Peoples Congress (UPC) victory in last December's general elections has been disputed in several parts of the country, also warned Saturday that his government might ask the United Nations for permission to repatriate some refugees in the country because they were engaged in subversive activities.

Observers here believed he was referring to refugees from Rwanda, many of whom have lived in Uganda for more than a generation. The Banyarwanda are ethnically close to the peoples of Ankole, in southwest Uganda, several of whom have been detained in recent violence in the wake of armed attacks on government installations and sol-

Obote, speaking at a public rally in the eastern town of Soroti, said the government would not allow consumer goods like sugar and salt to be distributed in areas where they might be given to members of underground

Parts of the country are still without electricity following last Tuesday's latest guerrilla attacks on the main power line to Kampala and the western region, on the Uganda radio transmitter outside Kampala, and the UPC headquarters in the city centre.

Obote has responded to the recent raids by placing all strategic installations in Kampala under heavy military guard. He also reversed his promise to confine his poorly-disciplined troops in barracks by taking the unprecedented step of introducing army checkpoints on all streets to reinforce army roadblocks on the outskirts of the city. Two people are reported to have been shot at the check-

Most of the suburbs and the city's industrial area are still without power and most industries have been shut down. Provinces to the south and west of the capital are also without electricity and a Uganda Electricity Board official said that the partial blackout may go on for another week.

The government has not commented on the week's incidents apart from confirming that the attacks took place. Responsibility for them was subsequently claimed in Nairobi by the movement for the Struggle for Peoples Rights (MOSPOR).

M.P.warns of race war in Britain

BIRMINGHAM, March 29 (AP) Maverick right-wing legislator Enogh Powell, a leading crusader against non-white immigration, predicts that Britain's racial problem will explode into "civil war" unless there is wholesale repatriation of non-whites.

Powell, who represents a district in Northern Ireland, said Saturday night that unless this country's 1.9 million non-whites went back to their homelands. London and other cities would face violent racial clashes.

Non-white community leaders condemned Powell's speech in Britain's second city as "provocative" and "inflammatory." It came amid mounting racial tension caused by increasing attacks by white extremists on non-whites and a worsening economic crisis in which non-whites have been hit hard.

Powell's speech was his most outstpoken declaration on Britain's smouldering racial problem since 1968 when he predicted "rivers of blood" from racial fighting in British cities. That speech made him a national figure, but resulted in loss of his job as health minister in the Conservative government of Edward Heath.

Powell warned Saturday that large-scale bloodshed could only be avoided by "such reduction in prospective numbers (of nonwhite immigrants) as would represent reemigration, hardly less than massive than the immigration which occurred in the first place.

U.S. Senate okays extra $200m cut

WASHINGTON, March 29 (R) — The Senate has voted to cut foreign aid by $200 million more than the amount sought by President Reagan and to use the money to restore prosposed cutbacks in domestic school

This followed an emotional debate on amendments to a bill sought by Reagan ordering cuts of $36.4 billion in the 1982 budget. The proposal to cut foreign aid still further and spend the money at home was made by North Carolina Republican Jesse Helms, a strong opponent of foreign aid. Helms also opposes domestic spending, and

Mugabe urges alien firms to set up units

SALISBURY, March 29 (AFP) - Prime Minister Robert Mugabe has invited foreign companies to invest in Zimbabwe, saying that they would have "very great latitude" in their activities.

In a news conference here he said that companies would be able to take profits out

The government "desired" that a major part of profits be reinvested in Zimbabwe but this was not a "strict rule," he said. "We naturally have stated as a matter of principle that as much as possible there should be local participation in enterprises established in the country," Mugabe said.

Mugabe, who was speaking in the wake of the five-day international aid for Zimbabwe conference which ended here Saturday, said he had been "overwhelmed" by its success, but disappointed by the British contribution.

He described Britain's total aid since independence last April of about £100 million ($230 million) as "insufficient."

The Zimbabwean leader singled out in particular the portion of its aid Britain had earmarked for the buying of land for peasant farmers (six million pounds).

He said he was "grateful to Britain" for pledging an additional amount "but I am afraid it falls far short of our expectations.

he later told reporters his proposal aimed to undercut future Democratic moves to restore school lunch funds.

Liberals led by Democratic Senator Edward Kennedy said Republicans were taking funds away starving children overseas to feed poor American children. "It is a sad day indeed when we pit the poorest starving children of the world - in Africa, Asia and India, with a billion children on the border of starvation - against American children and come up with the pious answer that this is really going to protect the budget," Kennedy told

"If that is the cost of fighting inflation, it is unacceptable," he said. President Reagan has proposed cuts of more than $1 billion in non-military foreign assistance and reductions of $4.3 billion in agricultural, school lunch and nutrition programs.

Senator Kennedy, joined by other liberals and supporters of foreign aid, lost by 70 votes to 26 an attempt to restore school lunch money, but not at the expense of foreign aid.

Never a popular budget item, foreign aid came in for another attack when a Democrat sought to cut a further $104 million in favor of health programs for ex-servicemen. But members of both parties on the foreign relations committee said this would harm U.S. interests, and the proposal was defeated by 48 votes to 44.

The bill under consideration, expected to be approved early next week, will instruct Senate committees to curb federal government spending by changing laws already enacted. They will have to meet the goals for spending cuts, but will be able to achieve them in any programs they wish.

Meanwhile, John Gilligan, top U.S. aid official under former President Jimmy Carter, has attacked the shift to emphasis on military aid by the Reagan administration.

He said Friday Reagan's new budget calls for an increase of $900 million in military aid and a drop of $1.7 billion in economic aid. "Presumably this massive shift signals that the United States regards the threat to these countries as predominantly, perhaps exclusively, military."

He said this would be hotly disputed, not only in the poor countries, but in the other countries that give aid. "It is foolish to beguile ourselves with the idea that the Soviet threat is the only problem," he said.

Hopes of EEC acord on farm prices soar

pean Community farm ministers meet here Monday for what should be a final round of bargaining on annual price fixing - and the outlook for an early agreement has been markedly improved by currency realign-

The recent summit of community leaders in Maastricht, the Netherlands, urged farm ministers to show the necessary will to reach agreement by April 1. But there are still serious contentious issues, including the desire by Britain and to a lesser extent West Germany to reduce the 70 per cent of the budget devoted to farming. There is also widespread opposition to tough proposals for limiting production surpluses.

The main hopeful sign resulted from the sudden devaluation of the lira last weekend, coupled with the general firming of the European unit of account representing a weighted collection of community currencies in which farm prices are expressed.

Consequently it was agreed to realign the monetary compensation amounts used to adjust farm prices in relation to national currency movements. This would mean that countries deemed to have weaker currencies such as Italy, France, Denmark, Ireland and Greece would benefit from an effective price rise in addition to the annual rise to be approved here.

The commission has proposed annual rises averaging 7.8 per cent, while the currency adjustment would be worth nine per cent to the Italian farm industry, 3.9 per cent to Ireland, 2.8 per cent to Greece and 2.5 per cent for France and Denmark.

The European Parliament, back-peddling somewhat on earlier attempts to put tight limits on farm costs, has voted in favor of an annual 12 per cent settlement while community farm organizations, particularly in Germany and Italy, want a 15 per cent annual

It is widely expected here that ministers will compromise on 10 per cent — which together with the currency adjustment means that most countries' demands would be satis-

However, the currency realignment has also meant a cut in export subsidies from 14.1 to 12.1 per cent for Britain and from 8 per cent to 7.5 per cent for West Germany

Climate good for investment in Gulf, says U.S. banker

KUWAIT, March 29 (AP) — A prominen U.S. banker was quoted here Saturday a saying he saw no foreseeable risks for American banking activities in the Arab Gulf reg-

Dennis Weatherstone, Vice-Chairman o Morgan Guaranty Trust, also rold the newspaper Al -Siyassah that the bank's operation have expanded in the region despite the out break of the Iraq-Iran war.

"There is nothing in the Gulf region now that may frighten off American capital fund for the foreseeable future, despite daily allegations that the region is on the threshok of major crisis of international dimensions said Weatherstone.

"These exaggerations," he said, "are the work of some political and military quarter. both in Washington and Europe. But these dire predictions are not convincing for large American banks that operate all over the world through a range of investment project which require more attention," he said, Weatherstone spoke to the paper in Engl ish, and an account of his statement wa reproduced in its edition in Arabic.

He said he was of the opinion that the Gul region was 'not undergoing any unjustifiable period of unrest.' To put it more directly, the situation now is not worse than in the past and the Iraq-Iran war threatens no geog raphical expansion or risks," he told the paper. "Our spirits toward the Gulf are high as we do not have to lend (funds) to the countries. Consequently, the margin of risk in the Gulf is limited."

Weatherstone said that Morgan Guaranty's Gulf operatons have further grown' since the outbreak of the war. "This is not to be attributed to the outflow of Gut capital funds but rather to the steady expansion of our activities in the region," he con-

Weatherstone expressed optimism that oil prices and surplus petrodollars will 'not explode beyond control in 1981, as had been

& Iran fails to halt economic

TEHRAN, March 29 (AFP) - The Iranian economy is in general decline two years & after the revolution, with a slump in currency reserves and growing budget deficit, according to a report by President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

The report, published Saturday by the Miran paper, said that first central bank estimates indicated that gross national product inconstant terms fell by nine per cent in 1978 and 13 per cent in 1979.

Noting that growth has been negative for three consecutive years, including 1980, the report said there was a situation of "economic stagnation accompanied by unemployment and inflation."

Agriculture and fisheries, which grew by some six per cent in 1978, slumped by about 2.5 per cent in 1979, and the most optimistic forecasts for the outcome of 1980 speak of a zero growth rate, the report added. The halt of oil exports in the last months of 1978 and throughout 1979 marked a turning point in the country's economic development and amounted to a great success for the Islamic revolution, the report said. The role of oil in gross national product had fallen from 36 per cent in 1977 to 26 per cent in

The mining and constructin sectors experienced a 17 per cent slump in 1978 and a similar decline the following year with the tendency continuing in 1980. Service and related industries slumped by about 11 per cent in 1979.

The country's foreign currency reserves totaled $10 billion in March 1980 despite the Freezing of Iranian assets abroad during the hostage crisis. The reserves fell between March and September when currency outgoitigs rose by 40 per cent. As oil exports resumed after the outbreak of the war with Iraq, dollar reserves in February this year were no higher than some $4 billion.

The report stressed that 95 per cent of garrency earnings come from the sale of oil, but warned that high oil exports were inflationary. The report said that the budget deficit was 355 billion rials ($46.8 billion) in 1978, rising to 500 billion in 1979 and 800 hillion in 1980, with no sign of the trend changing. Prices rose by between ten and 12 per cent in 1978 and in 1979 and were expected to have shown a 27 per cent rise in

Car exports

Ghost of protectionism haunts Japan TOKYO, March 29 (R) - Japanese officials are worried that Western Europe would raise protectionist barriers against a wide range of exports if Tokyo bowed to pressure from Washington and reduced car shipments to the United States. . Informed sources here say the authorities feel caught between competing demands from the European Common Market and the U.S. to limit car exports, and are trying to steer a path between them.

The sources said Washington has suggested that Japanese car manufacturers agree to hold down exports to the U.S. to the same levels as in 1978-79, which would be nearly 230,000 fewer cars than the record 1.82 million shipped last year.

In weighing Washington's demands, offi-cials here said they were concerned that even voluntary quotas on car exports to the U.S. would touch off protectionist measures in Common Market countries against cars and other Japanese exports.

Japanese analysts say that any cutback in car exports to the U.S. can only lead to severe pressure to do the same toward- the EEC, where Japanese car sales rose 20.8 per cent last year to 856,000.

Faced with this dilemma, the government will say that it needs the advice of the Japanese car industry, delaying its response to the pressure until the last moment, the analysts say.

The chairman of the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association (JAMA), Takashi Ishihara, has counselled the government to postpone any decision until September on grounds that the U.S. car industry has already hit the bottom of its trough and is starting to recover.

Viola vows to revive economy BUENOS AIRES, March 29 (R) -

Retired General Roberto Viola, who takes over as president of Argentina Sunday for a three-year term, inherits an economy which some fear is slipping rapidly into industrial

Argentina has been trying to adapt to free-market policies, but some think industry is in danger of shrinking until the country ends up simply producing raw materials for export and importing manufactured goods. While Gen. Viola has pledged there will be no basic change in economic policies, he has also promised measures to revitalize indus-

No details have yet been given, but the public is generally expecting devaluation to be one of the first moves. This would make Argentina's exports cheaper and its imports more expensive.

Eduardo Oxenford, chairman of the Argentine Manufacturers' Association, will be industry minister, an appointment which supports a theory in the local press that exchange-rate policy will be made more flexible and take second place to measures aimed at stimulating the productive sector.

In September, Oxenford said the then industrial policy was not in line with the ruling armed forces' economic program. The policies aimed at opening up the economy and slowing inflation by holding down the decline of the peso were ineffective, he told industrialists. Even the most efficient domestic industries were unable to compete with overseas suppliers, he said.

The Argentine economy is undergoing profound structural changes as it adapts to the free-market policies of the last five years after decades of protectionism.

Jose Martinez de Hoz - the wizard of Hoz as he is known in international financial circles - steps down as economy minister Sunday alongside outgoing President Jorge Videla, facing a barrage of criticism over the state of industry, continuing inflation and a flood of imports.

Policies introduced after the military coup of March 1976, involved a gradual process of reducing tariff barriers, the near-elimination of foreign exchange controls, the encouragement of foreign investment and reduction of the role of the state.

The policies appeared to have scored successes. By 1979 reserves had risen to $10.65 billion from virtually nothing at the time of the coup. The budget deficit eased, gross domestic product rose 6,8 per cent helped by a bumper harvest and there was a $1.1 billion trade surplus.

But last year, a poor harvest hit exports which, on top of a flood of imports, meant a trade deficit generally estimated, but not yet officially confirmed, of over $2 billion.

Reserve fell and GDP rose only 1.1 per cent, lowest growth rate in South America. and the budget deficit increased.

High inflation, high interest rates, a rate of devaluation which lagged far behind the rise in domestic prices and failure to compete with foreign goods hit Argentine industry and the banks and finance houses which had lent

WASHINGTON, March 29 (R) - U.S. aid to Egypt to increase food production has helped very little despite the massive economic assistance program mounted since 1975, said a report released by the General Accounting Office (GAO).

PHILADELPHIA, March 29 (AP) — Al Wood, a forward, scored a career high 39 points and breathed new life into a listless North Carolina offense, sending coach Dean Smith's Tar Heels into the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) title game with a 78-65 victory over Virginia Saturday.

the Tar Heels play Indiana Monday night in the final. The game will be preceded by a consolation match between Virginia and Louisiana State, which lost the first semifinal game to Indiana 67-49

Wood scored 23 points in the second half, when the Tar Heels launched an 11-point spirit that thwarted Virginia in its first trip to the finals.

Wood capped that run with nine points, giving North Carolina a 48-37 lead with 9:52 to play. Vood scored the next four points for North Carolina, and with the help of freshman center Sam Perkins, closed out Virginia's biggest offensive weapon, 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson.

In the other match London Turner ignited Indiana in the second half, and the Hoosiers earned a berth in the title game with a 67-49 victory over Louisiana State.

The ninth-ranked Hoosiers, tight and unable to get any momentum going in the first half, ripped off the first 11 points of the second half. Ray Tolbert grabbed an offensive rebound and hit a stuff shot with 59 seconds gone, then Turner, a 6-foot-10 junior, went to work.

He hit an assortment of lav-ins and short jump shots, scoring the game's next nine points, and Indiana led 38-30 with 15:5 to play. Turner wound up with 20 points.

Indiana coach Bobby Knight calls Turner his up-and-down player, great in one game, horrible in the next. In this game, he dominated and destroyed the vaunted front line of the fourth-ranked Tigers.

NEW YORK, March 29 (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard knocked down Larry Bonds in the fourth round and continued to beat up the garbageman from Denver until referee Arthur Mercante stopped the bout in the 10th round Saturday night to defend his World Boxing Council Welterweight Championship.

The end came shortly after Bonds got up from a knockdown in the 10th round. After regaining his feet, he was met by a barrage of head blows as he stood in Leonard's corner and the referee signaled the end at 2:22 of the round.

The bout in the Carrier Dome was all Leonard, who already is signed to challenge Ayub Kalule for the World Boxing Association junior-middleweight title June 25 in Houston

Many observers felt Bonds was chosen as Leonard's opponent because he is a lefthanded boxer, as is Kalule, a Ugandan living in Denmark. Leonard, fighting for the first time since he regained the title from Roberto Duran last Nov. 25, took charge of the fight after Bonds, fighting for the first time since last April 19, held an edge in the opening round on the strength of good movement and his right jab.

Bonds' strategy was apparent from the outset — jab and continually move, constantly changing the movement to alter the punching angles for Leonard and cut down on his accuracy. But it was just as apparent from the outset that Leonard's hand and foot speed would negate Bonds' strategy.

Before the fight, Leonard had said: "I don't think Bonds is going to create problems, not that he's not capable. Well, the 29-year-old Bonds wasn't capable of creating trouble for the 24-year-old Sugarman.

The first knockdown of the fight came late in the fourth round when Leonard, who weighed 145 ½ pounds rattled eight punches off Bonds' head.

In the 10th, Leonard landed several hard straight rights to the head. One of them hurt Bonds, who reeled away from trouble — but not for long. A hook to Bonds' side bent him sideways, and Leonard jumped him and floored him with a right-left to the head.

American outwits Ethiopians for title

Such was the Ethiopians' mastery in the second half of the race that they occupied. seven of the top 10 places and it seemed that no one in the field of 240 runners could find a way to keep on level terms. But Virgin, 25, from the Illinois farming town of Lebanon, bided his time behind the leading pack until the moment was right. With 200 meters remaining in the 12 kilometer event round the Hippodrome de La Zarzuela Racetrack, Virgin moved in for the kill and overhauled Ethiopian Mohamed (edir to win by 15 meters.

It was a repeat of his performance in Paris a year ago when he allowed England's Nick Rose to make most of the early pace before surging to the front in the closing stages. In the end the Ethiopians, despite their brilliant mid-race form, had to settle for second best and they may feel that though the strategy was sound their pace showed an apparent lack of judgment.

Virgin spent the major part of the race hiding in the pack, conserving his energy until it really matterd. When he went into overdrive at the start of the finishing straight, Kedir, the Olympic 10,000 meters, bronze medallist in Moscow last year, was unable to debut in these championships, would have been suited by a hillier course which would have enabled them to wear down their

SARAGOSSA, (AFP) — Spanish police have arrested the final member of the trio who kidnapped, Barcelona football star Enrique "Quint" Castro, it was announced here Sunday. Liem was more thoughtful in the second game, playing on Prakash's weak backhand, and raced through 15-4 in just 10 minutes. Prakash, from Bangalore, but now living in Copenhagen, Denmark, never got to grips with his own play in the final game and was forced into errors by the quick-thinking Indonesian. Liem collected £1,000 for his victory, while Prakash earned £ 500.

Sun Ai Hwang, a 19-year-old South Korean student, upset defending champion Lene Koppen of Denmark 11-1, 11-2 in just 21 minutes to capture the women's singles

Koppen, a 27-year-old dentist from Copenhagen, was bidding for her third straight all-England title but was outclassed by the stocky Korean girl, playing in Europe for the first time.

Koppen, the No.1 seed, served just four times in each game as the strong, mobile Hwang dictated the proceedings. "Almost everything went wrong with my game" said Koppen.

"She was very strong and very powerful, but I have no excuses. I'm perfectly fit but she just played too well."

Second seeded Hwang, a little surprised by the ease of her victory; said: "I played better than I expected, it has been a tremendons experience playing here."

Richards slams another sparkling, unbeaten ton

ST. JOHNS, Antigua March 29 (AP) -Star batsman Vivian Richards, such a local hero that his image graces Antiguan stamps, marked the first Test cricket match ever played in this native island with an historic century here Saturday.

Richards finished the second day of the fourth Test against England 110 not out with the West Indies, 236 for two in reply to England's first innings total of 271, in complete command.

From the time he came in, Richards batted with complete confidence, delighting an adoring home crowd of 9,000 with a huge hook for six off fast bowler Graham Dilley and 19 fours. It was his 13th Test century and his second in successive innings, following his 182 not out in the last Test in Bridgetown.

Richards came in after opener Desmono was caught by wicketkeeper Paul Downton. low to his right, off England captain Ian Botham in the second over of the innings.

He immediately asserted himself with three boundaries in his first over from Botham and, with opener Gordon Greenidge took full advantage of an easy paced butting pitch and a fast outfield. With Greenidge, he added 121 for the second wicket before Greeridge fell to a catch at mid-on by Bill Athey off medium-fast bowler Graham Stevenson for 63.

Everton Mattis replaced Greenidge and, after a slow start, batted with increasing confidence to be 56 not out at close, sharing an unbroken third-wicket stand of 103 with Richards

This dramatic hand was played many years ago by Bruno Grunewald of Belgium. He ruffed the opening heart lead and returned a club, winning West's king with the ace. After cashing the ace of diamonds he ruffed another heart, thus reducing his trump holding to the K-Q-J. There were still four trumps missing at this point. Grunewald was now faced with a very difficult problem to solve. He had to decide whether the trumps were originally divided 3-3 or 4-2. If they were divided 3-3, he could make the slam by drawing two more rounds of trumps, cashing dummy's Q-J of clubs, and then ruffing a heart to permit him to cash the 10-6 of clubs.

But if the trumps were divided 4-2 and he played his K-Q-J, discarding hearts from dummy, he would be unable to cash his 10-6 of clubs.

After considering the matter carefully, Grunewald concluded that in a hand so freakish the diamonds were more likely to be divided 4-2 than 3-3 and that desperate measures were required. Accordingly, he cashed the king of trumps, discarding a heart from dummy, and then cashed the Q-J of trumps, discarding the A-K of spades from dum-

As a result, Grunewald made the slam. After playing dummy's Q-J of chibs, he led the six of spades toward his J-5. East took the queen but, with only spades left, had to return one to South's jack. So Grunewald finished with twelve tricks consisting of six diamonds, five clubs and a

Salvadorans narrate terror tales

LONDON, March 29 (AFP) - Torture, terror, and starvation have been used on most of the 125 political prisoners in El Salvador's Santa Tecla Jail, The Observer reported here Sunday. The London Sunday newspaper carried first-person accounts by political detainees interviewed by its correspondent in San Salvador, whom military authorities 'allowed inside the capital's jail for political

The prisoners, mostly trade unionists, journalists, and academics, are confined four or six to a cell. Virtually no food is provided, and prisoners must rely on supplies from their families. Two journalists, Diaz Ramos from an international news agency, and Francisco Ramirez Avelar of the newspaper El Inde pendente, were being held without trial for subversive activity - charges they deny.

"We have not committed any political crimes," they told the correspondent. "We g with the oppositi on media were being honest, we were telling the truth." The journalists said they had been subjected to electric shock torture and beatings - as were all prisoners at Santa Tecla. Most of the torture, however, was psychological.

"The guards abuse us, they insult us and beat us, and aim their rifles through the bars of the cell doors," they said. On one occasion we were tied up and led outside and were told we would be shot. They used blanks". Concerning a schoolteacher in his midtwenties, the report said: "Across his arms, legs, body, and face large areas of flesh were laid bare where, he said, interrogators had thrown sulphuric acid on him to get a confession. He also said he had been indecently assaulted and had acid poured on his testi-

Most of the trade unionists in the prison worked at the privately-owned electricity supply company and were jailed after staging a 24-hour strike that blacked out El Salvador. They told of 18 union members being murdered in front of their families or workmates and of a further 30 losing their jobs.

The interpreter told the correspondent:

"They gave me hallucinogenic drugs for 48 hours. It sent me crazy for a week." Seven professors, including the director of San Salvador University said they had been jailed "without explanation", the real reason being "that we belong to the council of the university". They said there had been systematic persecution, kidnapping, and murder of teachers and students. Hundreds had been

In Washington, President Ronald Reagan's mail has been running 96 per cent against U.S. involvement in El Salvador, the president's chief spokesman said Saturday. White House press secretary James S. Brady said the White House has opened 7,224 pieces of mail concerning El Salvador, of which 6,939 letters were against U.S.

Brady released the breakdown of the mail Saturday, a day after a State Department official reported the strong disfavor of U.S. involvement in El Salvador expressed in letters to the White House.

The hijackers ordered the pilot to land in Managua, Nicaragua, where they released 34 passengers, then waited in vain for the Honduran government to open negotiations with them. They had threatened to blow the plane up if a Honduran delegation didn't arrive and begin negotiations by 2 p.m. EST (0700 GMT). When the Hondurans didn't show up, the hijackers then ordered the pilot to fly to

Following the aircraft's arrival, it was announced by Panamanian officials that the country's ambassador to Nicaragua, Baltazar Aisprua, had negotiated with the hijackers in Managua throughout the day and had flown with them to Tocumen airport outside Panama City.

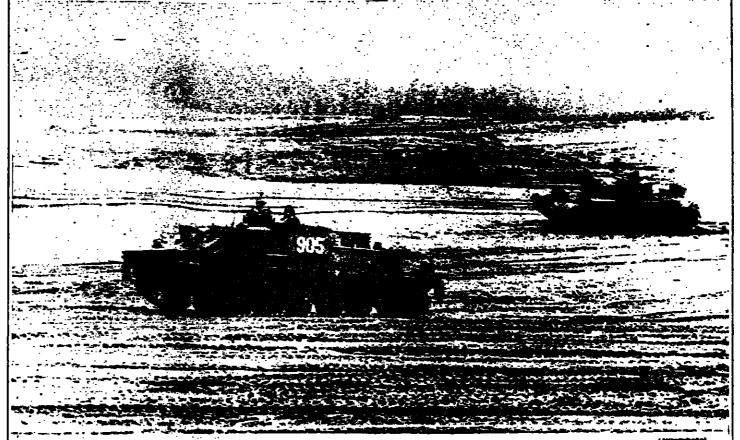

Within minutes of the plane's arrival, the hijackers surrendered to Col. Manuel Antonio Noriega, chief of military security forces. The captive : were freed, but they later reboarded the aircraft and flew back to Honduras.

On their arrival, the Honduran government announced it would "deport to the Republic of Panama at its convenience foreign undestrable elements who are detained in Honduran jails because of having been found responsible for illicit arms traffic."

The government statement said Honduras "deeply regretted" the incident and "deplores the fact that Hondurans are involved in this sort of activity, which is closely related to the political situations in other countries." It appeared to refer to El Salvador's civil strife.

Honduras, ruled by a military government, is a strong backer of the Salvadoran junta in its battle against liberation forces. Nicaragua supports the liberators. Panama's militarybacked leadership strongly supports leftist

Noriega told reporters the hijackers have applied through the Panamanian Foreign Ministry for political asylum in Cuba.

nuclear arms talks begin Tuesday

BRUSSELS, March 29 (R) - NATO officials meet here this week to study ways of resuming U.S.-Soviet talks on limiting nuclear weapons in Europe. The meeting Tuesday of NATO's special consultative group has been welcomed by the Europeans as a sign that Washington does not discount further East-West arms limitation talks.

But its results might not go much further than demonstrating to the allies that President Rouald Reagan's hard-line toward the Soviet Union does not make him insensitive to West European preoccupations, they said. The meeting was announced after a visit to Washington by West German Foreign Minister Hans-Diet ich Genscher earlier this
